BUILD BIG GRAIN HOUSE

Creel Grain Company to Build a Big Grain House at Ringling, Okla., Jan. 6.—Trackage lots have been purchased by the Creel

Grain company upon which to build one of the largest grain and produce houses in southern Oklahoma.

A. McCrory, speaker of the house of representatives of the fifth legislature, is planning to build a brick business block on Main street before spring. Besides being part owner of the Ringling News, Mr. McCrory is engaged in the dry goods business.

Charles Adams, an oil man of Ardmore, has had plans drawn for the erection of a fifty-foot-front brick business block on Main street, on which a three-year lease has been executed.

A company is being promoted to re-open the asphalt mine a few miles northwest of Ringling. This mine was operated a number of years ago with a plant that cost $100,000. The plant was not rebuilt because of the lack of transportation facilities. At that time the nearest railroad was the Rock Island, twenty-five miles distant.

The Oklahoma Oil Company, of which Don Cochran is president and manager, which does a wholesale gasoline business, has erected a warehouse, office and loading station. A. L. Frederick, formerly auditor for the Oklahoma, New Mexico and Pacific Railway Company, has become associated with the Oklahoma Oil Company.

W. W. Woodworth, oil operator and motor car dealer, probably will erect a large sales room on Main street early this year. Mr. Woodworth has a large oil income and is said to be the wealthiest dealer in motor cars in Oklahoma.

WHISKY AS CHILL TONIC

County Officer May Drink Liquor for That Purpose

McAlester, Okla., Jan. 6.—It may be wrong for a county officer to drink whisky for the pleasure of drinking or with the intention of getting drunk, but when he keeps it in his office as a chill tonic or neuralgia medicine and passes it around among his friends who are similarly affected, it couldn't possibly be used as a cause for removal from office.

This, at least, is the opinion of John Herron, a Canadian farmer, and recently petit juror in the district court, who was one of the twenty witnesses called by the state in the trial of John Crow, suspended county attorney, on grand jury accusations of drunkenness, wilful neglect of duty and malfeasance in office.

Herron said he was suffering with the chills one whole week while serving as a juror last October, and that three or four times that week he went to Crow's office and drank "chill tonic."

Four other witnesses told of drinking with Crow in the county attorney's office. A dozen had smelled whisky on Crow's breath and most of them believed he was under the influence of liquor.

Two of these were court officials who said Crow was drinking while prosecuting liquor cases.

It was afternoon before a jury was secured and only the allegations of intemperance were touched on in the first day's hearing.

One witness, a druggist, told of frequent sales of morphine to Mr. Crow, always on a doctor's prescription.

Judge William M. Bowles of Perry is presiding at the trial.
